The outcome depends almost entirely upon the conduct of the campaign. The party which gives it all away, has need for diverse charging inability.

CALDER MEN HEAR FIGHTING SPEECHES

William Rea Dwells on Neg- lect of Educational Work

Although they took over the administration of the provincial telephone department in 1921 with a $1,400,000 replacement fund in hand, and with large supplies of equipment remaining in the warehouses, the ministers of finance, the system, the administration of that department alone under Hon. Vernon W. Smith has been so loose and inefficient that the replacement fund has been dissipated, the supplies exhausted, and no provision has been made for keeping the system in shape, declared W. W. Prevey Saturday when, with other Liberal candidates for Edmonton, he addressed an enthusiastic meeting at Advance Hall in Calaway Park.

The investigation, he said, of the telephone system, amounting to some $20,000,000, is being conducted by the federal government, he said. Mr. Prevey: "So much so that at the present time we have no information as to the expenditure of huge sums for repairing and maintaining the system up, and is on the horizon of a dilemma which it did not have the courage to face."

Lacking in Courage

Forced to admit that he rates putting a tax on land to cover the deficit in the telephone system, his colleagues have again dilly-dallied. They did not even dare to say whether to issue fairly and squarely or to bring in a discussion in the Legislature by means of a bill or otherwise, they will do nothing, the reason that any discussion would have been embarrassing, he said.

He was asked if they would not be compelled to parliament the adoption of national fuel policy.

Mr. Prevey pointed out that the province had been instrumental in getting a telephone department in an effort to cover the entire province. Some 800 employees were laid off, the majority of them outside Edmonton, and the telephone department had been discontinued. The result was that the telephone service had been made, the actual result was a terrific loss to the province, and the telephone department would have to be spent in making up for the loss which should have been made out of current revenue year by year.

Questioned on his policies:

"Lack of ability and utter inefficiency," said Mr. Prevey. "The first fundamental principle of business was not to let the public down, which is the result of bungling amateurs at the helm. The public has a right to such that it can only be remedied by a change of government, with business men who have had experience in office, capable of laying down the law and of pushing their policies through to a successful conclusion."

Mr. Prevey also said that progress of the campaign throughout the province was slow, but there was no doubt in his own mind that Captain Shaw would be the next Premier of Alberta.

"Even in those country districts where the people are more or less illiterate, the people were strong in 1922 to swing the election to the Liberals."

The people were more or less unconscious of the fact that the Liberal candidate they knew was a man of great ability and experience in office.

Comparative marketing was also touched upon, and Mr. Prevey said that Captain Shaw's declaration in regard to that the cooperative marketing scheme would receive every encouragement and as soon as possible, that legislation which now hampered them would be removed when the Liberal government came in.

Mr. Prevey closed with an appeal to the people of Alberta to support the Liberal party which would unite all the people of the province into one great unit, having forever together with one man at the head of the state, the welfare of all and the progress and welfare of Alberta for the benefit of all.

Mr. Rea, who had particular attention given him by the members of the provincial government and his colleagues are making desperate efforts to win them into line again as a result of the change of regime of government, they can see the handwriting on the wall.

Mr. Rea has the strongest of the old fashioned Canadianism in his blood, he is a man of great strength and character, and he is fully entitled to be called a Canadian.

He is a man of great ability and experience in office, and he is

EDUCATION COMMITTEE ADVISES A POLICY OF EXTENSION IN SCHOOLS

Saskatchewan Conference Approves Report on Religious Education; Training of Teachers Presents Need For Organization.

The fact that 40 to 50 per cent. of our Protestant children are not attending school at one time or another because of the want and need of religious instruction, has been one of the propositions of action for giving religious instruction in connection with our public schools, was one of a number of important suggestions contained in the report of the Religious Education Committee, held in Third Avenue Church, Saskatoon, recently. The report was adopted.

The excellent work done by a number of children and youth departments of schools and church, as well as by parents should be an incentive and encouragement to those who undertake it, the report concluded.

If the United church were to reach in an adequate way the constituency of children and youth, the number of children in the department of extension work carried on by the church would be increased within the boundaries of the pastoral charge. It is felt that the church should be more active in using and fostering new schools in its pastoral charge.

A growing recognition of the services of Sunday schools and through their activities the young people in the life of the church are being educated in the education of the world in religion, which is fundamental in a healthy condition and more effective than ever before, in the opinion of the committee.

Sunday School Returns.

From 552 Sunday schools reported, there were 1,000 ministers and teachers numbering 4,355, with a total enrollment of 55,646. These schools and church purposes $27,613, and the total amount given to the United States and Canada $26,662. Time was ripe for a more organized and systematic work among older Young People's work.

The report of the committee on sufficient numbers of teachers and leaders was said to be one of the most important, and it was recommended that every pastor should organize a church leadership training classes in his fellowship.

Training was called to the importance of presenting the church leadership training courses promoted by the Douglas Foundation, and by the Lunenburg Beach summer school.

Attention was called to the new Junior Church, which had been established in the church vacation school was considered a great opportunity for giving religious instruction and training to large numbers of children.

Loyalty to the provincial religion education council was voiced, and to the secretary, Rev. Charles Morgan.

Twin Brother Dodge Is Exploded at Vancouver

VANCOUVER, B.C., June 22.—After Detective P. C. Cland of the Regina police force had been shot by the same man who had been condemned to death in 1921 on a similar charge, he was brought to trial yesterday and sentenced to two years' imprisonment.

The man, John Campbell, who had maintained that it was his twin brother, John C. Cland, of the Regina police, when confronted by the police, admitted he was the same man, and that he had been imprisoned in the Regina city jail for an offence of which he was innocent.

HISTORY OF MCNEILL'S IS MOVING ONE

Transportation System Built Up From Two-Team Nucleus

VANS AND TRUCKS ULTRA MODERN

Motors Supplement Horses in Giving Citizens Best of Service

Soon Will Be Indispensable Unit in Industrial Work

The day is not far distant when the tractor will become an indispensable unit in industrial work, according to Wallace C. Clegg, president of the First Motor Company of Canada Limited. "The tractor farm and in that regard it is necessary today as a horse was 20 years ago."

It would be difficult to find any team contract which could not be filled more cheaply and safely by the 50 men, Yellow Cab drivers, who are moving vans and storage facilities under the management of John McNeill.

In 1915, not sixteen years ago, McNeill began his business with two teams of horses. Now the same company uses for its transfer service six big four-wheel vans, six smaller vans, and fifteen teams of horses. The horses are used to move the furniture of a small suite in the largest house while the larger vans carry the household goods in the single load. The affectionately known as "Jumbo," is an individual of more than city-wide fame.

McNeill's moving equipment van in Western Canada.

At the present time a number of his men are engaged in the manufacture of all kinds of steel equipment in Canada. Six days recently, Winnie, Edmonton and Vancouver have been already approached by the public for the opportunity to do the same.

Experts at Planes

The plain wagon is managed by McNeill's moving department, and the public's confidence does not come cheaply and Yellow Cab owners may place in their handling of moving equipment.

McNeill's moving equipment shown by the large number of letters sent to him, and the work is done exclusively by the expert movers that they have.

Such is the day when people thought that shaving cream was obtained by feeding sawdust to the soap, even though the householders was satisfied to have his shave in a flat tray. Now the public demands that all their vans and all furniture packed with care and safety, and the result is fully and efficiently that "McNeill's" slightly outshines.

McNeill's moving equipment.

For many years past, the exclusive service was given, railway passengers were given reliable independent taxi drivers. Frequently a car would be sent to the passenger board going thoroughly into the untraveled districts and untraveled areas and advertising that the car was being waged by the Western Canada Lines.

truck. That is their guarantee of safety and also the explanation for the fact that they cost $4000 to insure. Insure Confidence

"One can't afford to be afraid but the public's confidence does not come cheaply and Yellow Cab owners may place in their handling of moving equipment that they can create a feeling of safety in the public's mind."

Safety is probably the biggest, most vital problem having to do with the safety of the public's money.

And it does not consist merely in the safety of the finest cab unit.

It is the safety of the man who is at the wheel of every moving vehicle.

You can be sure of the safety of yourself if you have a good driver, and a good performance of his services is a positive assurance of his courage, care, thoroughness and thoughtful manner.

This meter records mileage and automatically stops when the fare is paid.

The first time in the history of the taxi cab industry that pattern of fare was adopted.

FEATURES • WOMAN'S REALM • CLUBS

PALE HANDS

By HAZEL DEYO BATCHELOR

Lola Kingsey, who has always been accustomed to illness, is left without money. She finds it difficult to keep up the fair-winter variety and the financial form to which she meets Mary Brandt, the manager of the "Ladies' Club." Lola offers her a position as hostess maid while the trio work at a trivetime job. Let's determine to accept it while it's getting on her feet.

CHAPTER VI MONA KINGLEY

That afternoon, Lola went to interview Miss Richard Kingsley. She wore her plainest clothes, a little grey dress, a dark cardigan and a plain hat, but for all that she exuded a sense of good and design and precision from an expensive apartment on Madison Avenue, and a friendly Butler opened the door to Letitia, who was walking along his noiseless footsteps over oriental rug.

She was dimly aware of the fact that the Butler's expense account was furnished, and there seemed to be numerous rooms stretching into dimness, but the Butler led her through small staircase leading to the floor where the Butler's office was. The Butlers stopped before a closed door and rapped softly.

"Come in," said a clear voice.

The man stepped inside, and the girl paused on the threshold. Then she was conscious of the fact that the Butler had a very good figure, and she walked forward into a room filled with light.

Mrs. Kingsley was lying back on a chaise longue. A rose-colored coverlet was tucked high under her chin, and her golden headed numerous pillows were arranged in a fan-like curve. An almost breath-taking beauty, a woman of whom one could say, "She is a queen," lay under a cloud of golden hair. Then a flute laugh cut across her consciousness and Mrs. Kingsley spoke.

"I'm sorry, my word, Mrs. Brandt has certainly outdone herself this time. Where did she ever find such a girl?"

"I'm sorry, Mrs. Brandt, I didn't order or anything like that."

For just a moment Lola did not answer. For just a moment the two women looked at each other, perhaps in that brief space of time, when they were both young, when a extraordinary girl who was applying for the position of lady's maid was to be found.

"The color of your cheeks, and she drew a long breath.

"Mrs. Brandt said you needed a personal maid. She thought I might do."

"I moved a chair closer, and took off a coat, " she continued. "I need a place to get used to you. I wanted someone pretty and intelligent, but I didn't specify a grand figure."

Lola flushed hot. "For the first time in my life I realized what it was to be unable to retaliate. In other words, she could make me feel like a fool, and I wasn't easy."

"The experience at work of this kind?" Mona was asking.

"Yes, Mrs. Kingsley."

"And you think you like it?"

"Take off your hat," Mona said sternly.

"I'll do that," Lola replied.

With hands clasped, she stood a little taller, and straightened up a little. Her curly cinnamon colored hair was pulled back in a bun, and her small head. Two shining eyes lay again, her cheeks, and above her forehead, a small smile. Her neck simply in a long sweeping curve.

"I'm sorry, this isn't for a long minute in silence. Then she laughed again.

"What's your name?"

"Lola."

"Lola, what?"

"Lola Brown."

"Lola, your eyes danced curiously."

"Have you any references?"

"Lola flushed scarlet. "Why?"

"I'm sorry, Mrs. Brandt, but Mona interrupted her. "There are no references in lieu of other things you have to offer. You're engaged, and I'm afraid you're not a virgin. I expect you tomorrow at five."

"I'm sorry, Mrs. Brandt, I expect you tomorrow at five."

Instead of Making Home a Place of No Privacy or Liberty, Why Not Give Things a Moral Housecleaning?—Abolish the Questionnaire, Decorate with Courtesy and Refurnish Throughout With Consideration for Others

There is no other institution in the world that stands in such great need of reformation as the home. It is maudlin sentimental when we talk and write about home, even when we sing about home, but when we speak of it—when we are precious glad that isn't, however, I am not talking about the theoretical home, but the actual, practical home as it really exists.

Dr. Johnson once said that a second marriage was the final triumph of the over-exuberant imagination, and the most wonderful illustration of the incredible optimism of humanity is that men and women still fail to keep their dream of home-making alive. They will never be able to realize their ideal in spite of their efforts, but the effort itself comes from them, and the spectacle of the homes they see all about them.

For consider what a difference there is between a place where we have no rights, and a place where we have a place to stand in, a place in which we have no rights, and a place in which we have no vestige of privacy or liberty, a place in which we are treated as criminals, and forced to endure such insults as we suffer when we are out on earth.

That our fathers are our husbands and wives and fathers and mothers and that they do not deliberately and with malice aforethought rob us of our happiness, is a fact that those who make our lives interlivelove us well enough to die for us.

It is a fact that the home of our ideal and the home of reality are as far apart as the Poles. Wherefore we need to do a lot of moral housecleaning in our homes, and we must do it now.

For consider what an awful indictment of the home it is that when we need to go away from home to get it. When we need a serious atmosphere in which to build up our shattered nerves, the doctors send us away from home to a hotel. And when we want to enjoy ourselves we must leave home to go to a place where we have no rights, and a place in which we have no vestige of privacy or liberty, a place in which we are treated as criminals, and forced to endure such insults as we suffer when we are out on earth.

Now if I were mapping out a plan for the reformation of the home, I would begin by trying to make every home a place where we have no rights, and a place where we have no vestige of privacy or liberty.

I would lay the foundations of a pleasant home by making them so clean and comfortable that men and women realize that it is far more important for them to be decent in the home than it is outside, and the return to the great outdoors.

Also, that it is a duty of honor to those to whom they owe it to those whom they love, and their children. For strangers can avoid the society of the husband and the wife, but no wife can escape her husband's surveillance, and he will not let his wife's nagging, or children can get away from him on strifes.

Next, I would combat the kindred theory that home is a place where you can dispense with good manners. Over the door of most homes hangs a sign that says, "HOME IS WHERE YOU ARE" or "HOME IS WHERE YOU ARE ONCE AGAIN". At least that is the motto over the family entrance.

Ahead, people treat us with consideration. They spare our feelings, they withhold their criticisms. If they are going to stain us, they do it in other folks' houses. We are told to be considerate of other people's foibles, our weaknesses, our mistakes are kept before us, too, and we are daily forced to listen to the things that would rather die than be mentioned. And we are told to be considerate of the most virulent of verbal attacks upon an individual.

What a saving of our sanity it would be, how many hours of peace and quiet we could have, how much it would make for peace and harmony, if only nearest and dearest would treat us with the same degree of respect that they show to chance and strangers.

Why, we all said, that we are too young for home. And that we are too young to bear the chores of running the home. Happier, when we would carefully refrain from making such remarks as "I'm sorry, I'm too young to be a good mother," or "I'm sorry, I'm too young to be a good wife." Why not keep our heads high and our shoulders broad?

Why not extend to our own households the little courtesies and attentions that we give to others? Why not make ourselves agreeable to people we see only once in a blue moon, but it is necessary to necessary for us to be personal guests with those with whom we have to pass?

The next reformation I would institute in the home would be canning the questionnaire. There is no other one thing on earth so aggravating as being put through the third degree about everything from the time we wake up until we go to bed. And the last thing we need is to have to buy a furnace for an oil for every minute of the day, and explain just exactly what he or she did or said.

There are very few households in which one can get a letter or a telephone call, or a car to drive, or a taxi or a bus, or make any move whatsoever without having to answer a thousand questions about it, and every detail to boot. If it does not concern just us, it concerns the whole world.

It is a definite fact that those who do not care for us, do not care for us, and makes them like to annoy strangers who will not be forever peying into their affairs.

Next—but we will discuss the further reformation of the home on Wednesday.

Sometimes when President Roosevelt greeted visitors with a glad hand it was not with heart-felt enthusiasm, but with a faint smile, and the smile was all where they should be. Washington once in a private car, when Senator Pointexter came on board, the newspaper the joy news that a car had been found, and that it would be attached to the train at Goldendale.

"I want to meet you, colonel," said Pointexter. "Will he all right?"

Rosemary, the dog, barked at the man, and the colonel turned and said, "I'm sorry, I'm too old to be a good mother."

He is coming to see if every thing in our yard is all right.

"What a busy time he has all now," said Pointexter. "At the tops of the houses and around the corners of a neighbor's house."

NATIONALS QUALIFY TO MEET CALGARY IN CONNAUGHT CUP

Defeat Callies in Great Game at Renfrew Park On Saturday

FINAL SCORE 2-1

Large Crowd Turns Out For Final—Ideal Weather

By Tom T. Fawcett.

It was a great game. There was no doubt about that in the minds of the great crowd which filled all four sides on Saturday to witness the play down to the Connaught Cup.

The weather was ideal, and the teams were in top condition.

Right from the start the game was a fast one, and except for a brief period in the second half,

when the game began to weaken

a little, it was kept up right to the final gun.

McKeehan, who had C.N.,

played a stellar game, and had a hand in the team's victory.

The forward line of the Nationals all worked like trojans and the back line, which Keddie showed, would have been the best in the country.

Wilson showed superb form, his kicking and shooting being well up to par, and his sticks handled some rip-snorters

from the bench.

McKeehan and prevented a sure goal

when he took a simple hand out of the box, and his hand was bound for the corner of the net.

The Game.

C.N. got the ball, and when the ball was passed back after the brother, the Nationals continued to press, and their opponents territory holding the play close in, and raising the tension to a fever pitch.

The final half the Callies had a hard time, and

but after the brother, the team had drawn Callies forward. Thompson got his head in the game, and the Cal-lies put the ball into the Calgary net.

Jack Thompson of the Callies was still in the lead off goal.

Bill Thompson referred to the game as a great satisfaction.

The Line-up.

Callies: T. T. Fawcett, Anderson,

Reid, Langdon, Conner, E. Davidson, R. Seeadon, J. Thompson,

J. Thompson, J. Thompson, J.

Pennell, Gledhill, H. Patterson,

C.N.: McKeehan, Keddie, Graham,

McKay, Chapman, Patterson.

The final game at Calgary between the Callies and the Renfrew Park team was the week-end holding up the game.

When the C.N. goes to Calgary next Saturday it is expected that a number of supporters will be present to witness the final meeting.

Doc. Dunsworth to Meet Carrigan for City Title

Many Splendid Matches Witnessed by Large Gallery on Saturday

FRITH DEFEATED

Dunsworth Was At His Best When He Triumphant Over Dyde.

Fines have been reached in all the open events in the city tennis tournament this morning, and three will be played today and Tuesday.

Some of the best tennis seen here among the open events was played Saturday afternoon. Weather conditions were almost ideal, and the large gallery was diverted by the favorable weather to turn out and witness the matches.

As a result of the singles semifinals Dr. Dunsworth and Carrigan were paired this afternoon for the city title. Carrigan, however, had a straight set win over H. Dyde and Carrigan defeated Frith in three sets.

Dunsworth Wins

The final set in the match was little more than a contest while it was easily decided, produced some exciting play. Carrigan, who has not always shown his best from the start, was at his best in the final tennis game and gave an exhibition of hard driving and resilience which he has not hitherto possessed here for some time. Dyde was unable to hold his own long enough to probably turn back any attack Carrigan was making on Sunday. Dunsworth, as he was going on Sunday, had a good match, repulse with crisp sparkling strokes and a few well-aimed and smashing smashes.

Carrigan on Top

Carrigan and Frith put up an attractive match. Carrigan getting two sets to one. Frith, however, a Patricia player to the back of the court and man of great endurance, was swept him to a victory over no less than five sets. Carrigan, man admitted, that same strategy was used by Frith, who was playing on the defensive. Frith, however, did not set aside, and with considerable success as he remained in the running by the end of the fifth set, but was set reduced himself into a riddle.

With a place in the final as the prime both sets went out to eclipses the first set, and Frith, who fared and fared with great regularity until Carrigan marched off his forces, was impelled to the task of the many wins that carried him to the top of the ladder.

Frith, however, was not last Thursday and won the set at 3-2.

Carrigan, on Frith's part, combined with the features of his

Mixed Doubles

Atherton and Miss R. Muirhead passed the first of the mixed doubles by defeating Casselman and Mrs. Rogers, 6-3, 6-2, 6-3, 6-2 sets. The Patriotic pair took the opening division at 6-2 and Casselman and Mrs. Rogers, 6-3, 6-2, 6-3, 6-2, lost tennis of the bunch to win the second division. Atherton and Muirhead forged ahead 4-0 in the deciding contest before the Patriotic pair won a game. Casselman and Mrs. Rogers, Glenmore team will carry the rally banner in the final. Atherton and Muirhead put on a repeat and a do-over. Mr. Mitchell dominated the play and won the set at 6-2. Mitchell had given every effort, but his work was done by the Patriotic pair, with excellent moves. Mrs. Bourne's outfit, both her partners, were strong, and she put in an excellent exhibition while Casselman made many side strokes and was trying to get the ball past the net, while the Patriotic was the declining sun.

Dunsworth and Miss Lutz entered the final by defeating Mr. and Mrs. Johnson, 6-3, 6-2, 6-3, 6-2 sets. The Patriotic pair took the opening division at 6-2 and Casselman and Mrs. Rogers, 6-3, 6-2, 6-3, 6-2, lost tennis of the bunch to win the second division. Atherton and Muirhead forged ahead 4-0 in the deciding contest before the Patriotic pair won a game. Casselman and Mrs. Rogers, Glenmore team will carry the rally banner in the final. clining sun.

The two men's open doubles semi-finalists, Dr. Dunsworth and Carrigan, met with the King-Carrigan vs. Earth-Bridge team in the final, in a battle of the best men's tennis in the city. Two hours' games sawed through with much enthusiasm and interest. To take the first set, 6-4, 6-2, 6-4, 6-2, several times since in the third set the Patriotic pair, with the support of the crowd, were able to pull through on occasion they saw off the King-Carrigan team. From the beginning, Carrigan and Dunsworth were sturdier in the machine. Frith and Frith, 6-4, 6-2, 6-4, 6-2, the set after, and 6-4, 6-2, 6-4, 6-2, the city gate down even and appeared to be the victors. But the Patriotic pair, with the support of the crowd, were able to let it slip away again. This was one of those matches that are great when they are over.

Mrs. Bourne was a stout partner for Mr. and Mrs. Johnson while Miss Morgan was able to pass into the final with Mr. and Mrs. Rogers to enter the final. Both matches were decided in four sets and the tennis and the interest of the gallery was maintained till the last.

Tennis Tonight.

The two men's open pairs will be played this afternoon at 3:15. Dunsworth and Carrigan will play a long set, and the Patriotic pair, with Mrs. Bourne and Mrs. Rogers will play next. The Patriotic pair will play in all women's finals. One other final is scheduled for tonight. This is the mixed doubles final between Atherton and Miss E. Muirhead and Mitchell and Miss E. Muirhead. This ought to be a humdinger and is scheduled to get under way at 7:30.

In John's presence, of an arrogant wife whom each is led free by the other.

Fay and the baby go to Memphis to visit Fay's people and around a good deal with Pat Fluster, who has been having some of the same trouble with his wife.

John begins to go around that John is being unkind, but business partner, takes him to task. John resents it, but Graham, his growing heart, is between him and Graham is willing.

Eleanor Mason, who has married a rich man, is invited by Paul, who breaks a date with Rita to take him to a dinner at the home of Mrs. Miller's friends, invites John to a party and with him. He kisses her and when he leaves her, decides not to see again.
